In 2016, the Utah Safety Council formed a Women in Safety group to discuss the issues and challenges facing women in the industry. Women in Safety brings a unique perspective to the safety industry by providing an opportunity for new topics and open discussions.

The WISH Award is given to a female safety professional who has shown exceptional dedication and leadership.

The ideal recipient will be selected based on a variety of criteria including:

- Women performing exceptionally well in a leadership role.
- Women who have made cultural changes in their workplace or industry.
- Women showing creative excellence.
- Women making an impact on the safety and health of their employees.
- Any woman who contributes to the mission of the Utah Safety Council of saving lives by promoting safety and health through education, services and products.
- Any woman who has made a significant impact and/or participated in a unique safety initiative.

1. Has the nominee's company sustained any work-related fatalities during the last three years?
2. Does the nominee's organization follow a general safety and health program that has been formally reviewed in the last year?
3. Is the nominee part of any other professional associations? If so, which ones?
4. Does the nominee sit on any professional Boards?

Directions:

Please fill out this form completely and include a description of why the nominee should receive the award in 500 words or less. Attach any supplementary materials such as pictures, articles, handbooks, posters, etc. pertaining to the accomplishment.

Submissions are reviewed by staff and discussed with a panel of volunteers. The panel members are invested in the success of the Women in Safety program as well as the advancement of female safety professionals across all industries. Panelists may include board members, subject matter experts, division leaders, as well as safety professionals. The committee will review each nomination and make a recommendation for the award recipient. Awards are presented each year at the Fall Women in Safety event and are also recognized at the Utah Safety Council's Annual Meeting and Awards Luncheon.
